Green Cleaning Products Company Celebrates Staying Out of the Red
Earth Friendly Products Financially Rewards Employees for Their Dedication

Westwood, NJ – June 5, 2009 – While the economy is still riding a downward trend, one company is moving in the opposite direction. Earth Friendly Products, the manufacturer of eco-friendly cleaning products, is enjoying its ride on the up train, and both its current employees as well as its profits are benefiting from that good fortune. The company is pleased to announce a record-breaking quarter that has culminated in a one-week pay bonus to all of its current employees. In recognition of the dedication and hard work they have contributed toward Earth Friendly Products' successful ascent, all 165 permanent and temporary staff members have been rewarded with a share of the business profits.

In this bleak economy, companies across the nation are having enough trouble staying out of the red, let alone handing out money to the hardworking employees who are keeping them afloat. Just last week, the Bloomberg news service reported, "Unemployment in the U.S. probably surpassed 9 percent in May for the first time in more than 25 years." Further solidifying the severity of the nation's economic woes, AACER, the Automated Access to Court Electronic Records, estimates that in the month of March 2009, 7,843 commercial bankruptcies were filed. That figure represents a 23.2-percent jump from the filings in the previous month. In the first quarter of this year alone, over 20,000 businesses sought either Chapter 7 or Chapter 11, a 52.4-percent increase from 2008.

Earth Friendly Products is proving the exception to that rule. During that same time period, the company has witnessed large enough profits that it is now able to reward all of its employees across the nation, from California and Illinois to Florida and New Jersey.

"No one has control over this volatile economy," Earth Friendly Products' CEO Van Vlahakis states. "However, we do have control of how we recognize the hard work of our employees. By supporting and rewarding them from within during our good times, in spite of the world's hard times, we send the resounding message that they're valued. We believe that our valued employees will see us through this recession and well beyond."
